

Library is planning to add a similar program for undergraduate students studying physical and engineering in 2013.

In the winter 2012 semester, McGill Library conducted the LibQUAL+ survey with students and faculty. This is the eighth time the survey has been conducted since 2001. Approximately 1200 survey responses were received, and 500 of these respondents also provided written comments. Results demonstrate that overall, service expectations from undergraduate, graduate and faculty user groups are very positive. Users feel that the Library has improved in making electronic resources available off campus but there is room for enhancement. External access has improved substantially for faculty. The Library is meeting expectations regarding developing a website that enables users to locate information independently however offering more and different kinds of space remains an area for improvement for undergraduates.

Efforts to build awareness around the Library's important resources and services gained momentum in 2012. Friends of the McGill Library events continued to create a strong presence in the community. In 2012, the Friends hosted a free public lecture by Canadian novelist and fiction writer Charles Foran presented the MacLennan Lecture entitled City Unique: Montreal in the Life and Imagination of Mordecai Richler. MOMA Director Glenn D. Lowry gave the F.R. Scott lecture entitled A Fine Balance: When Art and the Law Meet. Actor Lucy Peacock drew from her work at the Stratford festival to present the Shakespeare Lecture entitled Work. Prayer. Carnival. My Journey with Shakespeare. Younger audiences also continued to be drawn to the Education Library once again offered story hours to children who attend Centre de la Petite Enfance de McGill (CPE)

4. PARTNERSHIPS

On a yearly basis the Library collaborates with partners

5. HUMAN RESOURCES: MILESTONES

In 2012, library staff consisted of 68 librarians, 28 professional & excluded staff and 11 library assistants. The Library hired three new assistant librarians, a stack assistant and a communications officer. Four assistant librarians were reappointed for an additional term. Eleven staff members retired (see listing, Appendix B).

Organizational changes

In September 2012, the McGill University Archives (MSA) moved under the jurisdiction of the McGill Library. In mid-October the Library restructured the organization to reflect recent changes in duties and responsibilities in positions (see organizational chart, Appendix B). The fall of 2012 also saw the jurisdiction of the Walter HITS and Geographic Information Centre (GIC) transferred to the Department of Geography. Liaison Librarians continue to provide data support and office hours. Group study rooms continue to be bookable through the Library's catalogue.

6. FACILITIES

As well as providing the tools and resources necessary for the library's operations, the library also provides a range of services to support the academic community.

7. BUDGET

The figures below represent the Library's sources of income, allocations and the breakdown of the Collections budget for 2012. The collections budget, as shown in Figure 3, is dominated by the journal budget in accordance with the University's status as Canada's top ranked research intensive institution and the concomitant user demand for journal literature.
